Polar Star has been designed for extensive cruising in both northern and southern hemispheres with very few stops in ports and for operation in cold climates.

Espen Oeino gave her a very traditional appearance and she is built to the highest technical standards combined with an abundance of practical and useful features. Her six decks offer her 12 guests enormous space for both entertainment and relaxation.

With an interior designed by Pauline Nunns Polar Star's spacious interior volume combines the rustic appeal of a grand country home with the traditional ambiance of an old sailing vessel.

Four large guest staterooms are situated forward on the main deck, each offering sea views through very large windows. The country home style has been translated in every single detail.

Extensive mural paintings and sumptuous wallpapers combined with an antique floor and innumerable pieces of antique furniture and appliqué fabrics accentuate the old-world charm of the main salon and dining area.

The upper deck is the owners deck and hosts a generous stateroom with his-and-hers bathroom and enjoys panoramic views forward and sideways through huge windows.

The sky lounge is the centre of the upper deck and the very friendly blue and white colours create a beach house atmosphere.

A spa pool on the wheelhouse deck aft accommodates ten and the sun bathing area is an invitation for extensive relaxing. Next to the Jacuzzi are two large flush deck skylights which supply the dining area underneath with natural light.

Polar Star is a yacht built for pleasure, but above all other considerations, it is a vessel intended to be self-sufficient during extended voyages on the high seas and suitably equipped for what ever may come.
